Seiko has jumped in and done an excellent job managing the weekly COVID tracker for Translation Services. This is a high profile project for Ipsos and the Public Affairs CS team. The data is released publicly each week. This project has a changing amount of countries per week with various amounts of edits that all need to be translated and launched in an expedited scenario each wave. We have now completed 14 weeks of this tracker (with more coming) and Seiko seamlessly coordinates with CS, the IIS PM, our translation vendor and the reviewers to ensure everyone knows what materials are expected when – this demonstrates her strong organization skills. This project has required evening and/or weekend work each week to ensure this is on track and I appreciate her dedication to this project and to the team as a whole! Thank you Seiko!

Accomplishments:

Mirian (Seiko), was the head translator assigned to this 6 country, fast paced and demanding high profile Amazon study.

Due to Amazon's constant questionnaire updates and the fact that we still needed to get into field ASAP, did not help the situation. Seiko, was very collaborative and professional as well as flexible, not only with the CS teams, but also with the operations teams (IIS PM and Scripting). She constantly was sending timing updates to the CS teams on when to expect the translated links and keeping them informed, while working internally with her translation team on the country links. She made herself and her team available for late coverage practically every day during the week and also scheduled weekend coverage as needed to make sure links were ready, tested and approved for a quick CS review and launch. Due to Seiko's dedication to this study, we were able to launch all countries and close the study in time to get the data to the end client.
